Prostitution ring snapped

By Neil Fater

Police have rubbed out an alleged three-person prostitution ring in Andover that used massage appointments as its cover story.

Two women and a man were allegedly selling sex out of Apartment 502 at 700 Bulfinch Drive, say police. Until officers ordered the operation out of Andover last Thursday, police say the three attracted clientele to their Andover apartment through two advertisements in the Boston Phoenix classified section.

One ad encouraged people to call "Misty" and make an appointment for a massage. Those who responded to would be given a price list that outlined "regular massages" for $160, "dominant massages" for $180 and two-woman massages for $240, said Sgt. James Hashem.

While they made no arrests, and did not charge any of the three, Officers John Pathiakis and James Moses told the people in the apartment to put an end to the operation, Sgt. Hashem said.

"They told them this type of activity would not be permitted in Andover and told them that they were going to be evicted. The management company has evicted them or is in the process of evicting them," said Sgt. Hashem.

"They were not arrested and they were not charged," said Sgt. Hashem. "Rather than let the operation continue (to allow police) to build a case, we elected to end it right there.

"They didn't want this to go on any longer. It's a residential area. There are kids around there," he said.

Police were tipped off about the alleged prostitutes by an

Under way, under spray – The Fire Department's new hovercraft, which travels on pavement, water or thin ice with ease and comfort, should make river or pond rescues safer and easier. Now all the department has to do is create a place to put it in the water in Andover.

Fire department will hover to the rescue

By Neil Fater

Fire Chief Harold Wright remembers a winter night three years ago, when he heard that a snowmobile rider on the Merrimack River might have plunged through the ice.

"The Merrimack River really scared us, because you can have both open water and ice," says Chief Wright. "The person turned up at a friend's house, but the question was raised."

How could rescuers cross the ice, fight the partially frozen river's current and still find someone in time to save him?

Firefighters believe they now have the answer – a hovercraft.

For those who aren't amphibious-vehicle junkies – or who missed Jackie Chan's Rumble in the Bronx – a hovercraft is a vehicle that can travel smoothly across both land and water by riding along "a cushion of air" that lifts the craft about a foot off the ground.

The fire department purchased a Hoverguard 800 hovercraft with about $46,000

It's a high-tech high

Electronics keep booming here

By Rebecca Lipchitz

While some of us are still struggling to program our VCRs, high tech business parks are springing up along Route 495.

The River Road area of Andover was zoned for industrial use 42 years ago, and has since become a bustling village of such office parks and manufacturing plants. But the old fashioned images of industry – gritty hands and smokestacks – have given way to gloves and lab coats.

"I defy you to go out there and put your finger on anything that looks industrial," says Town Planner Steven Colyer.

As computerized systems become the norm for everything from manufacturing to personal banking and the nature of industry changes at the speed of microprocessors, so does the definition of high tech.

"High tech has almost become low tech. The time spans between technological advances seem shorter and shorter," says Mr. Colyer, who laments the lack of planning time lost in the high-tech shuffle as businesses fight for space on the cutting edge.

The need to react to market demands is now measured in days, hours or minutes instead of months or years, he says, which only leaves time to react, not to plan.

According to Paul Parcellin, managing editor of Mass High Tech weekly newspaper based in Boston, the term "high tech" is

Vision times three – Andover optition Dana Cohen poses with three good customers, 4-year-old triplets Michael, David and Thomas Iannalfo. Mr. Cohen was recently featured in the July edition of EyeWear magazine.

A sight for more eyes

Optician renowned for work with children

By Rebecca Lipchitz

Kim Iannalfo has bought more pairs of glasses than she can count. She's an Andover mother of 4-year-old triplets, two of whom wore glasses by the time they were 6 months old.

Luckily, there's an optician in their neighborhood who specializes in fitting children for glasses.

Dana Cohen, of Blackberry Lane, owns Medford Optical in Medford Square, but is often seen cruising Andover after work, on his way to drop off a pair of glasses to Andover residents.

More than 75 percent of his clients are from Andover, Mr. Cohen said, which is why he keeps a stash of frames in a box in his car.

If you see an Andover child wearing glasses, there's a good chance she was fitted at her own kitchen table by Mr. Cohen.

Mr. Cohen has visited the Iannalfo home, but the boys, David, Thomas and Michael, do enjoy visiting the optical shop. It's not just the selection of more than 500 children's frames in custom-built glass cabinets at the eye level of a 4-year-old that the boys enjoy.

Asked what they like about the store where they get their glasses they replied in unison: "Toys!"

At the shop, benches double as storage bins, and inside are things to play with while your brother chooses his glasses.

While the clientele includes many Andover parents, Mr. Cohen often sees families from all over New England.

"Parents will travel all over for their children, but not for themselves," he said.

Meanwhile, his international clientele is growing.

In the July issue of EyeWear, a national magazine for optometrists, an article named Mr. Cohen one of the top 10 optometrists in the country specializing in children's glasses.

Boston ophthalmologists often refer their younger patients to

News In Brief

Cholesterol screening set

The Andover Board of Health will hold a Cholesterol Screening Clinic Wednesday, Sept. 17, from 9 a.m. to noon at the department office in the Town Offices.

The clinic is for Andover residents only, and an appointment is required.

The simple fingerprick test for total cholesterol costs $5, and does not require fasting. The program includes dietary counseling by the public health nurse and referral to one's private physician for follow-up care as needed.

For further information or to make an appointment, call 623-8295.

Don't drop out

Planning to drop out of Andover High School? Not so fast – school administrators have come up with a plan just for you.

Superintendent Richard Neal said he expects about 15 Andover students to be referred to a new "alternative regular education" high school scheduled to open Sept. 29.

High school guidance staff and administrators would recommend students for the program, which will be housed at North Andover High School.

Students would attend classes Monday through Thursday from 4-7 p.m. and spend 20 hours a week doing work or some form of community service for credit.

Mr. Neal said the staff for the program is expected to include a director who will also teach, three teachers and a counselor.

High School Principal Ellen Parker and North Andover High School Principal Ed Martin will share in administrative duties, Mr. Neal said.

Andover expects to spend about $57,000 on the project, while North Andover is expected to contribute about $45,000 and provide the space. The payroll for staff will be handled by North Andover, and Andover will pay North Andover on a tuition-type plan, he said.

The cost, he said is less per student than Andover's average per-pupil expenditure rate.

"The idea is to provide an Andover diploma, even if it takes longer," Mr. Neal said.

The program is not intended for special education students, but for students who are likely to drop out of the regular high school program, said Assistant Superintendent Marinel McGrath.

Mind game winners – Andover's South School fifth grade Odyssey of the Mind team was honored at the Statehouse this past June 18 for their first-place finish in the 1997 Odyssey World Finals competition. The team members and their coaches were hosted by State Rep. Barry Finegold (left) and State Sen. John O'Brien. The team got a tour of the Statehouse, and even an introduction on the House floor.

Conferring on Collins

State Rep. Barry R. Finegold (D-Andover) has written the School Committee asking them to form a task force to work on the restoration of the Collins Center at Andover High School

"Not only is the Collins Center a wonderful cultural institution, it is something that could be a good source of revenue to the community," Mr. Finegold wrote.

While Mr. Finegold wrote that he had heard from many people who were willing to work on the task force, Superintendent Richard Neal said last week he hadn't yet heard from anyone. He added that the Collins Center was part of the larger High School renovation project.

"You can't rush the timing of that," Mr. Neal said.

Committee member Timothy McCarron said he thought the School Committee had other priorities to consider at the High School before tackling the Collins Center.

TOWNTALK

Mr. Cohen, including families who have come from far away to be treated, he said.

Last May, one Russian mother who was exposed to radiation fallout in Chernobyl, brought her baby, about a year old, in for a fitting.

Because the child was born with severe birth defects and had no ears to support a pair of glasses, it was the most challenging client and his saddest case, Mr. Cohen said.

He fashioned a harness for the baby's head working with a local tailor.

"I really had to be creative. It was the biggest challenge I ever had, but it worked well," he said.

He's also seen parents weep with joy.

A Venezuelan family came in carrying their son, who was nearly 3. When Mr. Cohen found him the right pair of glasses, the boy jumped from his father's arms and ran around the store.

Mr. Cohen, who is accustomed to children running around in his store, asked the parents why they were crying.

They hugged him, explaining in broken English that these were their son's first steps.

"It's really very rewarding, to see their eyes light up," he said.

Mr. Cohen noted that the first 10 minutes of many visits often include calming down parents and answering questions about their recent visit with the eye doctor.

"Parents often say 'Oh this will never work. He'll never keep glasses on,' but it's rare for kids not to keep their glasses on. Once they can see, it opens up a whole new world," he said.

Little did he know that his degree in psychology, earned at Brandeis University, would be the perfect training for a pediatric optometrist.

He began his studies with the intention of becoming a pediatrician. A native of Newton, he graduated in 1976 and finished an apprenticeship with his father, Frederick Cohen, a now semi-retired optometrist, and former owner of Medford Optical.

Mr. Cohen took over the family business that year.

"After five years, I noticed that we really didn't see too many children," he said, and changed the store to specialize in pediatrics in 1981.

At most optical shops, including the other three shops he owns or co-owns, the selection of pediatric frames are about 5 to 10 percent of the selection. His Medford store has a few adult frames, 80 percent are child-sized.

Popular frames with kids include Disney designs, confetti, spotted designs and a selection of handpainted frames that feature various themes like musical notes, bugs, trucks, or for the young scientist, formulas like $E=MC^2$.

Mr. Cohen, who is bespectacled himself, is married to Ginny Cohen, a registered nurse at Brooks School in North Andover. Their daughter Laura, 12, does not wear glasses, and their daughter Rachel, 16, just got contact lenses.

"It's a teenage thing," he said.

Former editor speaks on breast cancer

Two-time breast cancer survivor Perry Colmore will speak about her book, Living With Breast Cancer, and about her experience fighting cancer at an event co-sponsored by Mary Immaculate Residential Community and Home Health VNA, Tuesday, Sept. 16.

The event will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. at Mary Immaculate, 189 Maple St., Lawrence. Ms. Colmore will talk about keeping hope alive while fighting cancer, and discuss what patients look for in their doctors and other caregivers.

Perry Colmore

The former editor of the Townsman, Ms. Colmore collaborated with photographer Lisa Adelsberger in writing the book. Ms. Adelsberger is chief photographer at the Townsman.

Ms. Colmore, 55, was diagnosed two and a half years ago with breast cancer for the second time. She began to write in her weekly columns about having cancer. Readers responded positively.

She decided to interview other breast-cancer survivors. "There's healing in story telling," said Ms. Colmore. "By telling our stories, we're sharing and comparing and learning that you can live with breast cancer."

The message of the book is: You can survive breast cancer. The people in the book vary in age, color, outlook, job, family situation, severity of disease and treatment.

Ms. Adelsberger asked each person how she would like to be photographed. Some are with loved-ones, some with a grandchild, one's on a motorcycle, another, the Episcopal bishop of Rhode Island, is photographed bald.

There is one man in the book, Bill Smith. "He's our token male," said Ms. Colmore, "because people don't know men can get breast cancer. Bill's brave. We had trouble finding a man who would talk about having the disease."

Living With Breast Cancer is also an exhibit of the framed photos and part of each person's story. It will be at the American Cancer Society's Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk in Boston Sunday, Oct. 5, and at Symphony Hall Oct. 19 for Concert for the Cure, where members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are donating a concert to raise funds for a breast-cancer research grant.

The exhibit opens at Montserrat College of Art in Beverly Sept. 17 for

Come Know Your Town

The League of Women Voters of Andover/North Andover is planning its third Know Your Town Fair for Saturday, Sept. 20, from 9 a.m. to noon. The fair was on hiatus last year so that everyone could enjoy the 350th Anniversary Celebration activities.

The fair will be a block party atmosphere outside and around the Old Town Hall on Main, Barnard and Park streets.

If it rains, the event will be postponed to the following Saturday, Sept. 27. Set up will begin no earlier than 8:40 a.m., because the streets will not be officially closed around the Old Town Hall until 8:30. Plan to bring one card table (space is limited) as well as refreshments, games or activities that will draw people to your table. Food must be non-perishable and you must fill in and return a form to the Andover Health Department.

Live entertainment and activities for all ages are planned.

The deadline to register a table is Thursday, Sept. 4. For more information, call KYT committee chairwoman Lisa Wilson at 623-8450 (9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.) or 682-9052 (6 to 9 p.m.).

A special, 'working' vacation

Go ahead, ask Barbara Spencer how she spent her summer vacation. Odds are, it won't be like you spent yours.

Not that she went to some exotic place utterly unaffordable to the rest of us. Indeed, she spent a week in one of the most "affordable" places in America – Appalachia. She just chose what most of us try to avoid – a "working" vacation.

The Old Schoolhouse Road resident was one of more than 2,000 volunteers who participated in the 1997 Jimmy Carter Work Project (JCWP) , sponsored by Habitat for Humanity International (HFHI).

The volunteers, who came from around the world, built 50 houses alongside former President and Mrs. Carter during the week-long build in seven Appalachian communities, hosted by seven Habitat affiliates, including five in Kentucky and two in Tennessee.

Ms. Spencer was with a group in Robbins, Tenn., which built a 24-by-48-foot home in five days for the Beasley family, which includes Charles Beasley, his wife and their four children, all aged 4 or younger.

While it was the first time Ms. Spencer had worked on the project named for the former president, she has been involved with Habitat for a number of years.

"I've been the (Habitat) coordinator for our church, the Unitarian Universalist Church on Locke Street," she says, "and seven years ago we raised money for the Lawrence affiliate.

"I also worked on a house on Railroad Avenue, with a group from MIT a few years ago. I did this trip partially because I wanted to meet Jimmy and Rosalyn Carter," she says.

But unusual vacations are not unusual for Ms. Spencer. In past years she has visited Tanzania, has traveled to Germany, and has worked as a volunteer for the National Forest Service in the northern Rockies, Kentucky and Washington state, building and maintaining trails.

"I try to do something special every year," she says, "and this was my special thing to do this year."

Ms. Spencer worked on a crew of about 15, which was led by a contractor from Florida. Also on the crew were a couple of other contractors, a monk, three residents of the Netherlands and a physician from California. Across the street from her project was a home being built by a crew of all women, including a judge from California who said she "had never lifted anything more than a pen to write a check to Habitat."

The group stayed in a gymnasium, "men and women together," Ms. Spencer says, "although we did have separate locker rooms and facilities."

But they all slept on the floor in sleeping bags, worked 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., and ate together in an enormous tent located between project sites.

She only saw the Carters for about an hour, but says they were very gracious.

"One man said, 'Isn't he the best ex-president we've ever had?'" she says.

Doesn't sound like much of a vacation? Ms. Spencer says she'd do it again. "It was a very moving experience," she says. " I don't agree with the theology of Millard Fuller, the founder, but I really agree with what he's doing, in providing housing for the poor."

The organization founded in 1976 by Mr. Fuller and his wife, Linda, is now working in partnership with people in need in more than 1,200 cities in 40 countries.

JCWP is the premiere annual event of HFHI, and the catalyst for the broader building project, Hammering in the Hills, a joint Appalachian building project resulting in new houses for 150 families in need.

Houses for the $7.75 million homeownership project are being constructed this summer through the Habitat for Humanity 1997 Jimmy Carter Work Project and the Federation of Appalachian Housing Enterprises Partnership Build.

Here's what's new in Andover schools

The short answer to what's new at Andover High School is what isn't new. Principal Ellen Parker said the staff is busy "cleaning house so the kids can visit." The high school is sporting a whole new environment, including a renovated cafeteria and outdoor courtyard. "The food may even taste better," said Ms. Parker.

For subjects more rigorous than lunch, the students have a new language lab, computer room and new light, bright, acoustically friendly classrooms. The staff, which includes 22 new members or positions, will have new copy machines, Ms. Parker said.

New spaces include administrative, guidance and nurse's offices.

Even the administration has been restructured. Department heads were eliminated and replaced with "program advisors" who will spend more time on administration and teach one or two classes.

The newest classes at the Doherty Middle School will include public speaking, debate and short skits as part of the Creative Expressions program. A few parents also got to add some creative expression this summer when they were involved in hiring 12 new teachers, said Principal Floyd McManus. He is expecting more students than ever – 740 and growing. When Mr. McManus arrived seven years ago, the enrollment was 428.

The theme at Bancroft Elementary School this year is expanding horizons said Principal Norah McCarthy. Since the school is expecting a shakeup when new modular classrooms should be available, Ms. McCarthy wants the students and staff to be prepared for an adventure rather than chaos. "We have familiar faces in new spaces," she said. The air quality that was troubling students and parents is greatly improved, and the new classrooms will open up enough space for a science lab. Fifth graders will be studying "the world of motion," Ms. McCarthy said.

Have you ever noticed anything special in the atmosphere at the Sanborn Elementary School? Dr. Jade Reitman has, and decided to make this year's theme "creating a climate for learning," which uses a weather and climate analogy to study everything from science and the natural climate to the human emotional climate. "We're reviewing our school values and ideas of respect, responsibility, resourcefulness and reflection," she said. Students will also learn to use a computerized weather tracking system, including a program called "Spacious Skies," designed by meteorologist Jack Borden. The climate theme will continue in music and art where appropriate.

West Elementary School is planning a divide-and-conquer approach this year by turning eight open-air classrooms into 10 walled-in classrooms. "It will definitely provide a better learning environment," said Principal Charles Friel. New staff include a full-time media teacher and new teachers in one second, third, fourth and fifth grade class.

While just about every school in the state is looking for more space, Shawsheen Integrated Primary School decided to study some. Their educational theme this year is "space," which will culminate in a visit from astronaut Charlie Precourt of Hudson, former commander of the space shuttle Atlantis. The space theme will become part of lessons in math, science, reading, technology, music, art and physical education.

And back on earth, a new program of class meetings will address conflict resolution and emotional maturity for students, said Principal Teresa Murphy.

South Elementary Principal Eileen Woods says the theme for this year is "Who I Am Makes a Difference."

There will be computers in every classroom, and teachers will work in study groups around assessment, gender bias, multi-aging and multiple intelligences.

The school is also a recipient of a $10,000 Authentic Research Challenge grant from the Center for the Advancement of Math and Science.

AVIS acquires more Taft land

After many year of negotiations, AVIS (Andover Village Improvement Society) has announced the recent purchase of 18 1/2 acres of land bordering Salem Street, formerly owned by Mary Lee Taft, widow of Alexander Taft.

These woodlands and wetlands are now added to a total of more than 1,000 acres preserved by AVIS over the years, says AVIS spokesperson and trustee Marta Hornidge. The new Taft land, contiguous to the present Taft Reservation, will double the size of Taft, thus protecting the area from future housing development. Another adjoining 13 acres has been acquired from Coventry Lane development as a result of the town open space regulations for housing developments.

The Taft Reservation is now at 50 acres. Warden Theodore Taylor and other volunteer workers will break new trails through this property to join the existing trails in the original Taft property.

The Taft family has a long history of interest in this historic section of Andover. Two generations of Tafts have occupied the Salem Street Gray Homestead since 1932. Its outbuildings and acreage are evidence of a once self-contained household. A shoemaker's shop stood on the property and land crops were raised, including flax, which was grown and fashioned into linen.

Rebekah Lockwood Taft, now living in Colorado and one of the inheritors of the estate, was the donor of the first Taft property. She wanted her land preserved and left in its natural, unimproved state, and named it in memory of her mother, Amy Gordon Taft.

The Taft trail bordering the new acquisition proved difficult on a recent walk, Ms. Hornidge said, with a dense forest of tall oak, maple, elm, gray birch, jack and white pine trees blocking the way. The floor of the woods is carpeted with tall ferns. Birds, too hidden to identify, were calling. The confluence of two streams, one the Skug, was also difficult to locate as every stream bed and pond is stone dry.

"But surely this area will be bubbling with water when this drought is over," says Ms. Hornidge.

At the annual cookout to honor AVIS wardens on Aug. 12 at Peggy and Jim Keck's home, wardens discussed their problems and successes in maintaining their reservations. This spring's violent storm brought added work, as it left many trails covered with huge fallen trees. Mountain bikes (not wanted on AVIS trails), which wear deep ruts on muddy trails, are also a constant problem.

"AVIS is grateful for the wardens' work, for without this help, AVIS could not afford to keep its paths for comfortable walking and skiing," Ms. Hornidge says.

anonymous complaint from a man who found, near the apartment building, a copy of the newspaper with an ad circled. He recognized the circled phone number as an Andover number.

In time, police were able to trace the number to the Andover apartment, said Sgt. Hashem.

According to police, Officer Pathiakis attempted to set up an appointment by calling the number, and was given a price list and a set of instructions. He was told to go to a River Road gas station where he would be given further instructions. Sgt. Hashem said police realized this was a way to screen clients to make sure they were "legitimate."

It was at this time police decided to confront the people living and working in Apartment 502, he said.

"They did speak to one of their clients who was on his way from the apartment, and he did confirm what was going on in the apartment for Officer Pathiakis," said Sgt. Hashem.

The witness agreed to talk on the condition of anonymity, said police.

Although police were not sure exactly how long the operation had been going on, Sgt. Hashem said the three people had been working out of Andover for at least a couple of weeks.

The national program provides students with a script for a puppet show about learning and disabilities, said Principal Vicki Simms. They've also got 17 new staff members and a new technology lab that will come in handy for the new science programs and speakers that come with the new Junior Achievement program.

Audit completed

Topham, Fardy & Co., with offices at 26 Essex St., announced it has successfully completed a peer review of its accounting and auditing practice.

The reviewer concluded that the firm complies with the quality control standards set by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA), the national professional organization of CPAs.

Topham, Fardy & Co. participates in the AICPA Peer Review Program, one of the AICPA-approved practice-monitoring programs. A firm participating in any of these programs must have an independent review of its accounting and auditing practice every three years.

The review was conducted under the auspices of the Massachusetts Society of CPAs, following standards issued by the AICPA.

Topham, Fardy & Co. provides audit, accounting, tax and consulting services to businesses, individuals and nonprofit organizations.

Happy volunteers – This group from Christ Church in Andover was among thousands of volunteers, donors and bidders who helped WGBH/Channel 2 raise more than $1.2 million at the station's annual auction in June. Among the 8,000 items was a Saab 900 SE, which sold for $27,650. About 130 Beanie Babies took in $21,000, and more than 250 travel opportunities brought $150,463.

He's a graves protector

James W. Bradley, director of the Robert S. Peabody Museum of Archaeology at Phillips Academy, has been appointed to the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Review Committee by U.S. Interior Department Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

James W. Bradley

The archaeologist and historian is one of six private citizens nominated to the review committee charged with monitoring, reviewing and assisting in the implementation of certain requirements of the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act of 1990.

The act requires federal agencies and museums that receive federal funds to work with Native American tribes and Native Hawaiian organizations to return human remains, funerary objects, sacred objects and objects of cultural patrimony.

"The issues before this committee are challenging and complex," Mr. Babbitt said in a press release issued by his office. "I look forward to their recommendations as we work to develop a process for disposition of culturally unidentifiable Native American human remains."

Bradley said, "Native people are now equal partners in the process of determining how their material heritage will be treated. Clearly this poses challenges for museums and archaeologists who had controlled these materials. At the same time, however, NAGPRA offers new opportunities for museums, archaeologists and native people to work together."

Mr. Bradley has been director of the Peabody Museum at Phillips Academy since 1990. He has a doctorate in interdisciplinary social science from Syracuse University, and has written extensively on archaeology and Native American people in the Northeast. He was nominated for the review committee by the American Association of Museums and will serve a six-year term.

Kinder Klothes is open

Rhonda Kitaeff of North Andover has opened Kinder Klothes Inc. at 10 Post Office Ave., which features children's clothing and accessories, including handpainted children's furniture, handmade dolls and photo albums.

The new location in Andover is an extension of the business she has run from her home for the past 10 years, Ms. Kitaeff said.

She sells clothes for girls from infant to size 14, and for boys from infant to size 6X.

"The clothes are very soft, very wearable, unique, funky, comfortable and snazzy," she said.

Office park in the works

Construction is under way at Minuteman Park, a new office park development on River Road.

The first building, which should be complete in about a year, is additional space for PictureTel, said John Kelleher, spokesman for developer Martin Spagat.

Mr. Spagat, president of Brickstone Companies in Andover, said as many as seven buildings could be built on the River Road property, but the rest will go up as demand grows.

The entire development could include up to 960,000 square feet, Mr. Kelleher said, but the layout of the buildngs would be spread out with lots of green in between.

The wetlands restrictions of the area will make the development unusually spacious, he said.

Mr. Spagat wouldn't be specific about other buildings on the site, but he's confident of the demand for space in the future, Mr. Kelleher said.

Drivers in the area also may worry about demand for space, but Mr. Kelleher said a comprehensive traffic study was done, and the widening of River Road bridge over Route 93 should mean

AHS will open on time, for sure, says Mead

By Neil Fater

For the first time in many Andover High School students' memories, project management firm Mead Consulting is saying with certainty that the school should open on time and without a construction scare, Sept. 4.

It wasn't such a sure thing earlier this summer. On July 17, responding to complaints from contractor Stone-Congress about the project architect, the town created a list of 21 items that it said had to be completed for school to open.

The good news is that all but one of these 21 items is completed, said Sharman Lappin, project manager, Tuesday.

The bad news is that the one remaining item is electrical work, including a fire alarm for Dunn Gymnasium, meaning the gym will not be available during the opening weeks of school. However, students can use, and teams are already using, the refurbished locker rooms and the new fieldhouse.

Ms. Lappin said architect Earl R. Flansburgh + Associates and Stone-Congress are discussing what to do with Dunn Gym.

"There are meetings ongoing to get any questions resolved," said Ms. Lappin. "The plans are there. It's just that the contractor had questions, so the questions need to be answered."

In general, local officials have expressed pleasure with the work done since the list of 21 items was produced. Students will find a changed school once again.

"Things are looking very good," said Ms. Lappin. "School will be open. The students will return to find a huge cafeteria, because the stairway that used to be in the middle of the cafe is now gone."

Students will also find a new language lab and learn that they must enter the science wing through one of the corridors closest to the gymnasium. They will sit, if they choose, in a new, $120,000 concrete courtyard area in front of the school.

"That's accessible and open and really quite a beautiful spot," said Ms. Lappin. "It's a whole new component."

More studious minds will quickly find their library supplies temporarily housed in two classrooms. Ms. Lappin said Stone-Congress is saying it will complete the work phase that includes library renovations by the end of October.

If current projections hold, Stone-Congress should hang up its hammer sometime in March, 1998. That's the date Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski listed as his goal for having the school finished.

The project was originally supposed to be complete in August, 1996.

Elementary, my dear

As for South and Sanborn elementary schools, the other two schools renovated with money approved in 1994, there are still some small, so-called "punch list items" that need to be addressed.

Although South was labeled as substantially complete two autumns ago, and Sanborn was called substantially complete last fall, Ms. Lappin confirmed, "There are still lingering punch list items for both schools. There are minor, very minor items for South."

At Sanborn, the chief problem is with site work around the school, she said. Specifically, some of the trees planted at Sanborn don't seem to be growing in the school's environment.

Info underload has Media One customers on hold

By Neil Fater

Add Andover's Cable Advisory Committee to the list of people upset with cable provider Media One. The committee is sending a letter to the cable giant, calling for Media One to provide the same level of customer service provided by its smaller predecessor, TCI Inc.

Although Media One is taking steps to address its problems, town cable officials keep hearing about difficulties from residents who can't get through to their cable provider. Like others in the state who have switched to the so-called "broadband" cable company, Andover residents have learned it can be difficult to reach Media One over a regular phone line.

The trouble sounds, on a small scale, like what happened to America Online when it went to a single price for unlimited usage, and was unable to meet the demand.

"There's a large number of complaints," says Jack Dempsey, the cable committee chairman who has received complaints at home and work. "The complaints are that (Andover residents) don't know where the channels are, and then they can't get through to find out. When they do get in, it seems the person doesn't know what they're talking about and (the callers) get bounced from person to person.

"Some people have stayed on the line 45 minutes and just given up," he says.

Mr. Dempsey says Andover customers are trying to call Media One to find out when a worker is coming to their house, or to learn about the new channels, the new channel realignment and other options now available through the cable company.

But they are having trouble getting answers.

Media One says its massive, multi-year, $1 billion reconstruction project is a big reason its calls have increased by 20 percent over last year. This increase has made it harder to handle all the calls.

"I've probably received in the last two weeks 30 or 40 calls," says Tony Torrisi, who serves as a cable liaison for the town. "The number one issue is, you're put on hold for an extraordinary period of time. It's unacceptable to us, but I think it's also unacceptable to Media One."

Bob Carr, Media One's manager of government affairs, has explained the steps the company is taking to help better answer questions in a letter to the town.

Some residents can also take matters – and their cable boxes – into their own hands.

Mr. Torrisi says residents who missed an appointment and want to exchange their old cable box for the new Media One cable box can bring their box to the company facility at 191 Chandler Road.

Steps taken

Mr. Carr's letter to the town says Media One plans to hire more "customer care personnel," use people from other regions and use outsourcing to handle some of the calls.

A "team of specialists" is also developing a better way for Media One to electronically respond to questions, wrote Mr. Carr.

But Mr. Dempsey says he's concerned all these new people will mean callers may end up talking with more people who still can't provide them with the information they need.

"Having just read this letter I'd be concerned that the people they're going to outsource may not have the answers either," he says.

Mr. Dempsey also says the problems weren't addressed quickly enough.

"It's kind of late. We're quite upset with them. They could have done more," he says.

Despite the complaints with customer service however, both Mr. Dempsey and Mr. Torrisi say Media One's cable product is outstanding.

Besides praising the quality of the cable reception itself, Mr. Dempsey says people who have used Media One's Internet service have said they'll never go back to using a modem.

The cable chairman also says he expects installation and its problems to be over within a month. Media One originally thought it would be done in Andover by Labor Day weekend.

"They are behind schedule. They'd told us by the end of August they'd have it all done," says Mr. Torrisi. "We're going to have to get an updated schedule from them."

People with underground cable who have not received new boxes can check Media One's schedule for work on cable channel 11.

"It's distressing that their first big push in town has had all these problems, but I know they're trying to do a lot at once," says Mr. Torrisi. "In terms of service, I have the new system and it's very nice."

The cable committee wants to make sure the customer service is as good.

"We're not satisfied with their attempts to handle the problem," says Mr. Dempsey. "Mr. Carr gave us a very nice letter but we still want to register a formal complaint."

SCHOOLS

It's back-to-school time already... Andover's public schools reopen Sept. 4

Are your students' immunization records up to date?

By Joan Ashlock, MSN, RN

A parent informed about childhood and adolescent immunization is important to the health of our community. Prior to school starting is a good time to make sure we have updated our children's and adolescent's immunizations. We in Andover learned as a community last year the importance of immunizations with an outbreak of measles (the 10-day variety).

The measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) immunization is routinely given between 12 and 18 months of age. A booster is needed between 4 and 6 years of age.

If they did not receive a booster between 4 and 6 years of age, or there is any question whether the child received their MMR booster, they should be given the MMR booster between 11 and 12 years of age.

As a parent of a 19- and a 22-year-old, I want to emphasize to parents the American Academy of Pediatrics' recommendation for the three-part hepatitis-B series. Currently, most babies are immunized as newborns and infants. But this is a relatively new vaccine. It is ideal, if children have not been immunized as infants against hepatitis B, to receive the three immunizations at 11 and 12 years of age. This series entails some planning for those late adolescents and young adults who have not received the vaccine and are no longer going to be living at home. The first injection is followed by the second in one month and then the third injection to be given six months later. (That's the most difficult one to get in, once they move out of the house.)

Keep in mind that most college infirmaries will give these injections but the student must request them, pay for them and be responsible to get them according to the time schedule. Some insurance programs will reimburse for the hepatitis vaccine and others will not.

Hepatitis B, contracted through blood and body secretions, can lead to chronic liver disease and cancer of the liver.

Another immunization the high school graduate needs is a tetanus booster.

The chart (at right) shows the latest guidelines for childhood and adolescent immunization.

Thankfully, we have vaccines for many diseases that can cause some awful consequences. Vaccines have been made even safer in the last two years.

Infants should be immunized against pertussis (whopping cough) at 2, 4 and 6 months of life with the DTaP (diphtheria, tetanus and acellular pertussis vaccine).

Every year at Boston Children's Hospital, I see several infants from the Merrimack Valley quite ill with whooping cough. As we get older pertussis is not life-threatening, as it can be to infants. Infants should get a DTaP booster between 12 and 15 months of age.

Tetanus immunity must be boosted with a shot every 10 years for everyone.

Hemophilus influenzae type B bacteria can cause meningitis, as well as several other serious infections.

Despite its name it is a bacteria and not a virus. There are several vaccines marketed that impart immunity to this bacteria. Most often we call it "Hib." Most require an inoculation at 2, 4, and 6 months with a booster between 12 and 18 months like the DTaP.

Polio immunity is given along with the "baby shots" at 2 and 4 months and as a booster at 6 months to 18 months and again at 4-6 years.

Many can remember the polio epidemic and are exceptionally thankful for this vaccine.

Now we also have a chickenpox (varicella) vaccine that can be given after 12 months of age. Children born after January 1997 are required at 1 year of age to have the vaccine if they are in day care.

Children without a documented case of chickenpox by the time they are 11-12 years of age should have the immunization.

It is important to keep records of your child's immunizations, signed by the physician who administered the immunization, when a child changes schools, goes to college, or gets a job with children or in any health-care field.

Then, parents, after we have ensured our child's or adolescent's immunity, it's time to schedule our own physical, cholesterol test, Pap smear, mammogram, PSA test (for the father's 50-ish birthday), and get in shape for the walk, run, or ride in the Feaster Five on Thanksgiving Day.

Local parenting education, enrichment program continues to expand

Parenting education in Andover is expanding again with more schools supporting the Townwide Speaker Series, and two new workshops being offered. With the collaboration of Parent to Parent, Andover Public Schools' PTOs and PACs, the Pike School and Andover School of Montessori, the Townwide Speaker Series is being offered for the third year free of charge. The series includes varied and timely topics, with something of interest for every parent of children in grades K-12. A yellow brochure with the following parenting enrichment programs will be mailed to every parent in early September.

The Townwide Speaker Series will begin Nov. 5 with Dr. Michael Thompson, child and family psychologist, presenting "Give Me Harvard or Give Me Death!" – From Preschool to College What Are We Doing to Our Children?

On Nov. 19, Linda Braun, executive director of Families First, will speak on "Helping Siblings Live Harmoniously So You Can Too." Other speakers include Catherine Steiner-Adair, director of education, prevention and outreach, Harvard Eating Disorders Center; Malcolm and Laura Gauld, headmaster and director of Family Learning Center at Hyde School, nationally recognized speakers on character education; and Carol Plotkin, LICSW, an annual presenter on sexuality.

Local auditions looking for young stars this fall

DCS to hold auditions for Confetti Kids

The Department of Community Services will hold auditions for Confetti Kids Friday, Sept. 5, at 3:30 p.m. in the West Elementary School auditorium on Beacon Street. Membership is for children in the Merrimack Valley in grades 3 through 9.

Children must be accompanied by an adult and be prepared to perform a simple monologue such as a nursery rhyme, child's poem, or dramatic interpretation. They will be asked to sing one verse of America (My Country 'tis of Thee). Participants will be chosen for poise, dramatic ability, and voice quality.

Confetti Kids will meet Thursdays from 3:15 to 4:30 p.m. in West Elementary School's music room. Theatrical skills will be developed with skits, pantomimes, and improvisational exercises in class. The group also develops a musical repertoire and occasionally performs for community events. There is a tuition fee and costume fee. For more information contact the DCS, Josie Walker at 475-8261, or Maureen Brennan at 689-2399.

Merrimack Junior Theatre sets audition dates and times

The Merrimack Junior Theatre will hold auditions for students in grades two through six for its fall musical, Tom Sawyer, Thursday, Sept. 4, and Friday, Sept. 5, from 6-9 p.m. at Doherty Middle School auditorium.

The musical adaptation of Mark Twain's classic features the escapades of Tom, Huck, and Becky. According to organizers, the musical numbers are delightful and the story line is lively, as Tom, Huck, and Becky get in and out of plenty of trouble.

The audition consists of each child singing a few bars from America (My Country 'tis of Thee) and acting out a brief poem or monologue of not more than one minute in length.

Each child is requested to bring a non-returnable photograph of themselves.

The production will be the weekend of Nov. 14.

For more information, call Corinne Gediman, MJT president, at 475-3422.

THE REAL ESTATE CORNER

with Pamela Lebowitz

IS THERE A RECREATION HOME IN YOUR FUTURE

One-third of the respondents in a recent survey estimated that they had a 50 percent chance or better of buying recreational real estate in this decade. The reason is that "baby boomers" increasingly have the resources to buy a second home or make other recreational investments. The study suggests rising consumer confidence and the direction of future buying trends.

Preferred locations for recreational properties in order of popularity are beach areas, lake areas, mountains, the Caribbean and other tropical areas. Less popular sites were golf and ski-related communities and desert locations.

The ideal recreational property is still the traditional detached single family home or cabin. But a fast-rising alternative is a vacant parcel of land for later construction or a second home. Resort condominiums are a strong second in popularity.

Age, marital status, sex, geographic location and income greatly affect prime choices in recreational property. For example, single males have a significantly higher preference for resort condos and vacant land than single females.

The most popular states for second home and recreational purchases are (1) Florida, (2) California, (3) Colorado, (4) North Carolina, (5) Texas, and (6) Arizona.

Your Dental HEALTH
by Richard D. Hopgood, D.M.D.
PREVENTING GUM DISEASE
For most adults, gum disease poses a greater threat to the health of their teeth than tooth decay. And, as with tooth decay, the cause of gum disease is harmful bacteria that reside in the plaque that continually accumulates on the teeth. Thus, the primary method of preventing gum disease is to remove plaque and calculus (the hardened form of accumulated plaque) from the teeth. This means the patient must take responsibility for removing the sticky buildup on tooth surfaces with a toothbrush and floss. Beyond that, the dentist or hygienist can periodically remove plaque and calculus from below the gumline, from periodontal "pockets," and from areas patients cannot reach.
Regardless of age, everyone can benefit from preventive dental care. Evidence proves it is to your advantage to take the time for your teeth, no matter how busy your personal or professional schedule. A few minutes spent each day on your teeth can save on future dental visits. Nothing is more economical than regular dental checkups, so please call us at 475-2431, 296 Lowell Street, Rt 133, with easy access off Rt 93.
P.S. Over 60% of patients 45 to 54 years old have experienced moderate periodontal attachment loss.

Andover residents join rally against NESWC

By Rebecca Lipchitz

Andover residents joined the fight this week to shut down the NESWC (North East Solid Waste Committee) incinerator by forming their own chapter of the Merrimack Valley Environmental Coalition.

The group is working under the name "CARE" or Concerned Andover Residents for the Environment," said member Steve Crowley, after a press conference Tuesday outside the incinerator.

More than 20 local environmental activists stood together on a grassy area across from the entrance to the NESWC plant in protest of the plant.

Ed Meagher of North Andover and president of Merrimack Valley Environmental Coalition (MVEC), held the conference to draw the attention of state legislators, Attorney General Scott Harshbarger and Gov. Paul Cellucci, he said.

The NESWC incinerator on Holt Road in North Andover is run by Wheelabrator, Inc., which has a contract to incinerate the trash of 23 Massachusetts towns that are members of the NESWC.

Activists say the plant creates dangerous levels of toxic chemicals like dioxins in the air and mercury in the water.

"There's no safe harbor here," said Roberta Whitney, an Andover mother of three speaking against the operation of the plant.

Citing what they consider dangerous toxins, a dis-incentive to recycle and unreasonable expense, the group announced plans to lobby state officials to close the plant.

No safe harbor – with the NESWC incinerator smokestack behind her, Andover resident Roberta Whitney speaks against the operation of the plant.

NESWC's contract with Wheelabrator is currently under re-negotiation, but many NESWC town lawyers agree that there is no way to break the contract, which requires each town to provide a minimum amount of trash to the plant each year, pay a fee per ton of trash delivered, and pay between $46 million and $53 million collectively to build a new air filter system for the plant.

Steve Crowley, Andover resident and a teacher at the South Elementary School, said new research on the effects of high levels of dioxin in the atmosphere and mercury in the water are enough to back an argument to close the plant, and enough to take their issue closer to the top.

"They think it's a done deal, but I'm not convinced it is," said Crowley, who aims to help the group fight the contract at the state level.

"Each community in NESWC needs an organized group to resist this," he said.

Ms. Whitney said she chose to raise her children on outside play, in a home with open windows and home-grown produce, but now questions the meaning of a healthy lifestyle.

"In the Merrimack Valley, are these healthy family choices or deadly ones?" Ms. Whitney asked the group.

Anne Wein, also an Andover mother and member of CARE, said she wants to form a local chapter of MVEC to bring their message to Andover.

Her message to the group in protest was periodically interrupted several times by trucks passing the corner to enter the NESWC plant.

"We are just wasting the environment by burning all this stuff unnecessarily. Some people have no conscience about it. They put it on their curb and it's gone," she said in an interview before the conference.

Mr. Crowley said his conscience is what drove him to form CARE, after he did some summer reading, including a book called "Our Stolen Future," a report on the dangers of dioxins in the atmosphere. The report cited low doses of dioxin as a cause of Attention Deficit Disorder, often treated with the drug Ritalin.

The national rise in Ritalin prescriptions may be a result of a national rise in dioxin levels, Crowley says, adding that he feels the need to act on the findings.

"If you know that is doing this damage, then my attitude is that you have a responsibility. My obligation is to stand up and say something ... If I don't do it I'm not much of a teacher, am I?" he said.

He is also a member of the national Green Party environmental group, which is holding its annual convention in Lawrence this week.

They plan to join a rally across from Lawrence City Hall on Friday, Aug. 29 held by MVEC.

approved by the 1996 Annual Town Meeting. Although the money was originally slated for other purposes, the department decided before the meeting that the money would be better used on the new rescue craft.

Firefighters say it will make ice rescues both safer and faster.

"It was part of a total package of trying to upgrade our water rescue facilities," says Chief Wright. "Once we get to the scene, we can take off, right off the back of the trailer (used to transport the hovercraft). It makes for a very fast response. You can get right out to the victim and get back to shore quickly."

"It's one of those things. You may never use it, but if you use it once and it saves some kid who slipped though the ice it's worth it," says Selectmen Chairman Jerry Silverman. "It's like insurance."

Andover and Lowell may be the only Massachusetts communities with this type of insurance, according to Chief Wright. Hovercrafts are rare for fire departments. But they may become less rare. The Montreal, Canada, fire chief is stopping in Andover on his way to an American vacation to take a look at the craft and see if it would work for his city.

Because Andover's hovercraft helmsmen must go to Lawrence for river access (see sidebar), however, the Montreal chief will have to go to the Lawrence public boat ramp to catch firefighters spinning the hovercraft 180 and 360 degrees.

But he'll learn that spin-outs and water donuts aren't just for kicks.

Although the craft can stop relatively quickly in water, on ice a driver must complete a 180-degree turn so the hovercraft's rear fans will blow in the opposite direction and stop the craft. Without the turn, the hovercraft would continue sliding down the river.

This 180-degree maneuver takes practice to do properly, especially because a driver must begin to turn and stop much sooner in a hovercraft than in a typical water craft. Yet even first-time drivers seem to get the hang of it.

"I like it. I thought it was a piece of cake. You've got to get used to it, that's all," says Firefighter Dennis Sullivan, who had his first drive this past Friday. "It's the perfect boat for ice rescues. Before, we'd have a (row-boat type) boat and we'd push someone out. Now, it's going to get there like that."

"It's going to do the job," agrees fellow firefighter Paul Girard.

Andover's hovercraft can travel 40 m.p.h. on water and 70 m.p.h. on ice. It has a V-8 engine, a snowmobile-style seat for up to three rescuers and room on each side of the seat to place a victim.

Firefighters have been training virtually every day this month, except for a week when the craft was in the shop with a damaged fan. The hovercraft company paid for the repairs, says Chief Wright.

"Most of the guys are enthusiastic and have done real well with it so far. You do become accustomed to it fairly quickly. It's a pretty simple craft," says Lt. Armand Guilmette.

"They're going to be training from now until ... I don't know when it's going to stop to be honest with you," says Chief Wright. Training at night and on ice has not even started yet.

As for the hit taxpayers will take for all this training, Chief Wright says, "I like to say there's no additional cost."

That's because three initial hours of instruction from the hovercraft salesperson was included in the deal. Since then, Andover firefighters have been training themselves simply by taking the craft out for a spin – so to speak. The department's philosophy seems to be that practice makes perfect; the more one hovers the better trained one is.

Smooth ride

Every Andover firefighter will receive a few hours of basic training on the craft, and firefighters at West station, where the craft is stored, will receive more extensive training and develop a set of operating guidelines, says Chief Wright.

West station firefighters don't seem to mind the summer training too much. The smiles on their faces and the chatter at the station is a visitor's first clue.

"It's like going to Disney World. It's fun," says Lt. David Lynch.

But this is no Space Mountain. Climb aboard the hovercraft as it sits in the trailer, and you'll barely feel any bumping as the craft hits 2,800 r.p.m., swiftly exits the trailer, crosses a parking lot, skips down an access ramp and begins coasting across the water. This is one smooth ride.

When driver Armand Guilmette does his 180s and 360s, you'd hardly notice the spin cycle if it weren't for the spinning faces on shore – and the water on your back.

Andover's hovercraft is an open-air vehicle, and it does spray water. When its running on land, people to the rear must cover their eyes or they'll be blinded by flying dust kicked up by fans.

But the hovercraft does not spray significant amounts of water out of the sides when the craft has stopped and, unlike a boat, there's no motor in the water to slice someone. Firefighters say it will not send debris flying.

"Their (the manufacturer's) claim is you can put a dozen eggs on the ground and run over them and you won't break them," says Chief Wright. "It does spray a little bit, but there's nothing underneath there to hurt anyone. You wouldn't want to do it, but you could drive right over someone."

Lt. Lynch says a trainer drove right over some buoys without causing a problem.

"It can go on the land, the snow, the water, the ice, it doesn't matter. It will serve a good purpose," he says.

Being able to drive across thin ice and into water is where the craft will earn its keep. Firefighters say there is always someone who goes out on the ice either on the 150 acres of Haggetts Pond or along the four miles of the Merrimack River.

"If we have a really cold winter, people always have the impression that the

By Neil Fater

With their new hovercraft on the scene, Andover firefighters say they'll be able to make speedier ice and water rescues. The only problem is, there's currently no way to get the hovercraft directly into Andover water, in Andover, in the first place.

"That's our biggest problem right now. We have no water launch access in Andover," says Lt. Armand Guilmette.

To do their training on the Merrimack River, firefighters are hauling the hovercraft to the public boat ramp in Lawrence, and practicing rescue maneuvers there. They say they could also enter the Merrimack from a Methuen access ramp off Route 110.

But there's no access ramp in Andover, a fact firefighters knew when the department opted to purchase the hovercraft instead of other equipment with money from the 1996 Annual Town Meeting in April.

If an accident required the hovercraft today, firefighters would have to take the craft to Lawrence, enter the river and hover up the Merrimack to the Andover accident site, says Fire Chief Harold Wright.

"By not having anywhere to put this (hovercraft) in, in Andover, we're going to have to do something," says Lt. David Lynch. "We understood that when we got (the hovercraft). The issue was getting this piece of equipment. Now we'll work on getting a boat ramp."

Chief Wright actually is working on getting two Merrimack River boat ramps.

From water to land – The Fire Department's new hovercraft has no trouble going from the river to the ramp. It's just that there's no ramp yet in Andover.

One would be near the Greater Lawrence Technical School, and the other will be part of the area being developed by Marty Spagat, west of the Interstate 93 bridge, says Chief Wright.

Mr. Spagat would pay for the second ramp, while the town would pay for the first ramp, he says.

"We're not talking much money here at all. We're talking about a rough grade and some gravel," says Chief Wright.

An entrance onto Haggetts Pond might also be possible, if Public Works Director Robert McQuade agrees.

"That would be really nice because we have people out there on the ice every year," says Lt. Guilmette. "The ice out on Haggetts is never stable."

Stay clear – The fans of the Hoverguard 800 hovercraft kick up lots of dust on land, and lots of spray on the water.

High tech ...

Photos by Lisa Adelsberger

tronically oriented, including biomedical companies.

"It's not limited to pc circuit boards. A great deal of technology is information oriented. The distinctions between the two seem to be blurred," he says.

Who qualifies?

But if we could stop time on this day in 1997, what would local business people say is the meaning of high tech right now? Some disagree, even with time on hold.

Mr. Colyer says he considers high tech companies to be those that have a technologically advanced end, not just a means.

"Technology changed and evolved and began going into more exotic fields," Mr. Colyer says, using PictureTel as one example.

Kevin Flanagan, spokesman for PictureTel, says the company is considered high tech because it uses computerized and electronic systems as both a means and an end.

PictureTel designs and manufactures video-conferencing equipment and employs more than 900 people in Andover between its two locations in Brickstone Square and the Minuteman office park on River Road, Mr. Flanagan says.

He narrows the field of high tech to industries that include circuit boards and microchips, and excludes companies that only develop or employ software.

Sidney Falthzik disagrees. He's the principal of The Entrepreneurs Institute, a new company (five months old) a fraction of the size of PictureTel (he employs eight associate consultants).

Mr. Falthzik, an Andover resident, aims to help start-up companies or incubators integrate technology, specifically voice-recognition software, into the way they do business. Any company that uses or promotes technology should be considered high tech, he contends.

"Ten or 20 years ago, there was a time when high tech was at two levels: HP (Hewlett Packard) or Intel, and garage entrepreneurs," says Mr. Falthzik, citing Steve Jobs, famous for developing the first Macintosh computer in his garage.

But the advent of the Internet has created an information management explosion that should not be excluded from the high tech industry, he says.

Data mining, a process that uses computer power to find relevant information in a sea of data, is a new concept that is the reason lines between high and low technologies have become blurred, Mr. Falthzik says.

Jackie Appel agrees. She's director of marketing for NaviSite, an Andover affiliate of CMGI Management. NaviSite employs about 40 people and maintains servers for businesses that use the Internet on a daily, large-scale basis, but don't have the computer capacity on location.

"Traditionally I think people focus on high technology as associated with a product company. But we're a service company and we are oriented toward high technology. I think particularly last year the definition really broadened because of the Internet. Companies are starting up that weren't possible before – not even envisioned," she says.

This is the place

Whether you're managing information electronically or building the power supplies that make the electronics possible, the Merrimack Valley is the place for you.

Vicor designs and manufacture power supply converters for computers and appliances. The company has been in Andover since 1984 and employs more than 900 people, about 58 percent of whom work in the firm's manufacturing plant on Federal Street off River Road.

That plant is expected to double in size. The company headquarters on Frontage Road is also expanding.

Vicor has infiltrated the high tech market at many levels by selling power converters to telecommunications companies, cellular equipment manufacturers and Internet related companies. While the bulk of its customers are in the Silicon Valley, it is still best for them to be based in Andover.

"It's a quality of life issue," says David Nesbitt, Andover resident and senior vice president of sales at Vicor.

The town infrastructure, which includes a business-friendly town government, convenient routes to Boston, a concentrated talent pool and, of course, space, has the key elements businesses are seeking, Nesbitt says.

And a few golf courses don't hurt either.

For some Japanese businessmen who visited Vicor, it's now a status symbol in Tokyo to be wearing a Vicor hat on the green, Mr. Nesbitt says with a smile.

The amount of industrial space in Andover is often the initial draw for large manufacturers like Raytheon, Hewlett Packard, PictureTel and Vicor.

The economy does it

While the Andover area is eligible for help from the Lowell-based Massachusetts Office for Business Development, Mr. Colyer contends that they're about as busy in Andover as a Maytag repairman.

"It's the strength of the community itself that brings (businesses) here," Mr.Colyer says.

Endoscopy, a division of Smith & Nephew Dyonics, is a pioneering manufacturer of endoscopic surgical tools and has been operating in Andover for more than 12 years.

Hooks Johnston, senior vice president of manufacturing at Endoscopy says that it's also in the businesses' best interest to invest in their home town.

"We're all members of the community. That's a common link we have," he says. Endoscopy, like many Andover businesses, encourages employees to work with the local school systems and communities.

Jody Van Velsor, of Human Resources at Vicor, moved to Andover because this is where she wanted to raise her children.

"I was looking for a small company. Little did I know they would triple in size," she says with a sweep of her arm standing in their busy manufacturing plant.

Vicor keeps up on its community work by joining school-to-work programs with local schools and the Greater Lawrence Collaborative Visions program for workers with disabilities.

It also takes advantage of Merrimack Valley talent streaming out of universities including MIT and nearby Merrimack College, she says.

One of their newest employees is James Heffernan, an Andover resident who just left the Army. He was one of 40 people hired from a field of 450 applicants, Ms. Van Velsor says.

Three cheers for volunteers

There is an old saying, in a book that has become so controversial that we won't mention it by name, that still remains relevant even here in the sophisticated '90s.

"Unto whom much is given, much shall be required," is the message. Essentially, it is a realization that most of us are blessed. We not only have what we need, we have a lot of what we want. We have enough to share with those who don't have enough.

And it is heartening to see that Andover has more than a few residents who pay more than lip service to that philosophy.

The most recent example, in the pages of this week's paper, is one of your neighbors, who took vacation time to travel to one of the poorest sections of the country to help build a home for a family that wouldn't have been able to afford it without help.

She wasn't the only one there. According to Habitat for Humanity, more than 2,000 volunteers from all over the world gathered in a poverty belts of Appalachia to share some of their free time with people in need.

For a week, people who normally wear white collars or judges' robes or surgical scrubs left them all back home. They put on jeans and T shirts and did manual labor. And at the end of that time, a house had risen up that is now a home for a family.

But Barbara Spencer is no isolated example of generosity. Throughout the summer there has been a steady stream of reports about local people volunteering to make a corner of their community better, taking to their bikes to ride sometimes thousands of miles in a fundraising effort, helping local youth or elders, or donating equipment or expertise to a project that might be unaffordable otherwise.

The results range from thousands of dollars to seek a cure for deadly diseases, to homes for the homeless, to something as simple but critical as a clean, safe place for kids to play.

Most of these people could have just written a check and headed out on their regular vacation. And indeed, that would have been a sacrifice on their part, and a worthy contribution to good causes.

But they gave something even more precious – time and effort. And in most cases they came back realizing that in giving, they had received. They came back with an understanding of the cause, and knowing the camaraderie that comes from working with a group to benefit someone other than yourself.

That is the kind of connection no check can provide. These people deserve our thanks. More than that, we should follow their example.

Thanks for reasonable disagreements

By Perry Colmore

Once, when I was editor at another newspaper, I took a photo of a car accident. An elderly gentleman had run off the road and hit a fence, damaging the fence and denting the front of his car. No one was hurt. I didn't know if I'd run the photo or not, but when you're in the news business, you take the photo when news is being made. You decide later to run it or not.

Word got out that I was at the accident site. The man's son, a large and loud man, walked into the newspaper office. "You're not going to run that photo of my father's car accident," is the way our conversation started.

Really, it wasn't much of a conversation. In between his outbursts, I tried to say that I would decide if we'd run it after I saw it, and after I saw what other news we gathered that week. I tried to politely say that I would make the final decision, but he wasn't listening. He stormed out of my office, not satisfied with my answers.

During the days leading up to publication, the loud son called several times. He became more and more agitated, until he finally threatened me in the strangest way. He said he was going to start going through my trash to find something incriminating to use against me.

Now I suppose I didn't really care if he went through my trash. But he was dangerously close to my Achilles heel: My teen-age son was at home alone a few nights while I was working on the newspaper, and when I felt he was threatened, I was uncomfortable. So I called the newspaper's lawyer and we got a restraining order on the man. And that's the end of that story.

I'm remembering the story, and others like it, in the wake of Carl Drega's rampage in Colebrook, N.H. My first reaction to that story was: I'm glad I wasn't editor of the paper in that community! Now I am happy to say that I have never come across anyone that deranged, as far as I know. That man, everyone knows by now, killed two New Hampshire state troopers, a judge and a newspaper editor. He wounded four other officers before he was killed in a shootout with police in Vermont.

It's sometimes dangerous being in newspapers. If we're doing our job, we're sometimes reporting on people and incidents that some people wish we wouldn't print. But if we don't cover the news, obviously we've lost our credibility. Our theory, as you know, is that readers have a right to know, and it's up to us to inform them as best we can.

At the Townsman, we get perhaps a call a month from someone asking to be kept out of the police log. That's happened with drunk-driving charges and with domestic violence. While I was editor, that situation never got that ugly. Yes, people weep, and they say the newspaper will ruin their lives if we print the story. As gently as possible, I remind them that the newspaper is not responsible for the behavior that brought them to the log.

I've been at the Townsman since late 1989, and we've had only one restraining order during my editorship. We have been threatened a couple of times, but usually we deal with sane, mostly sensible and reasonable people.

Yes, people get mad at us sometimes, but we can always explain why we did something, why we covered a story the way we did, why we ran that photo, and so on. And though they may disagree with what we did, at least the disagreeing party is most often reasonable. Thank God.

The neighborhoods have to stick together

Editor, Townsman:

In your editorial of August 14, you criticize the fact that some citizens of Shawsheen filed an appeal with the Zoning Board over the issue of installation of lights on the lower Shawsheen field. You argue that the proper place for discussion and disagreement was town meeting, where Warrant Article 47 governing installation of the lights was passed in 1996.

You preach that it is the responsibility of citizens to argue their positions before their fellow voters, and you mock the contention of the group who oppose the lights that the voters at town meeting did not really know what they were voting for at the time.

To learn a little about how this problem came about, I suggest you undertake a simple exercise: Read the warrant article that was passed at town meeting, compare that to what the town has been planning to do (which only became common knowledge about three months ago), and you will see that there is a vast difference between the two.

Continuing your research, you could talk to some of the neighborhood people who took part in meetings, sponsored I believe by the Recreation Department, leading up to the article and the 1996 town meeting — meetings where there were discussions on use of the field and installation of lights.

You would learn that what was discussed at those meetings bears little resemblance to the town's current plan. Some of these citizens, in fact, also attended town meeting, spoke in favor of the article, and voted for it, because they judged the warrant article as written to be a fair summary of what they had discussed; however, as I've said, what is being done bears little resemblance, and so they now stand opposed.

Ironically, the town manager and soccer association point to those same preliminary meetings as an example of their outreach on this issue, saying that little opposition was expressed. Again, the reality of the plan as it now stands was never discussed at those meetings nor at town meeting, and therefore there was little reason for anyone to disagree back then.

Warrant Article 47 is a sort of "Trojan Horse" article. As it was written, it passed without much scrutiny, but is now being used to justify and complete a very different job – one that the voters did not approve.

This "unauthorized" work will cause problems much larger in scope for Shawsheen than would have been caused by the proposal as described in the warrant article. And that is why, now that the town manager's intentions have been laid bare, there is sudden, widespread, and strong opposition to the installation of lights and night-time use of the field. Either the warrant article was poorly written, or it was correctly written and subsequent decisions and actions have departed from the spirit and letter of the warrant article. I don't know which is true, but neither is acceptable.

Now that this mess is in the light of day, so to speak, it seems that town government does not quite know how to make it right. On the one hand, the people voted at town meeting; on the other, they didn't vote for what the town is doing. Again, on the one hand, Andover reportedly needs more capacity for soccer games; on the other, maybe trampling an historic neighborhood with a night-time circus is not the way to get it.

Town management is stuck, "wriggling on a pin." It appears that the selectmen are waiting for the Appeals Board, and vice versa. And perhaps they're all waiting for time to just melt the problem away somehow.

I agree with you that this issue should go before another town meeting. Maybe this time, however, the article will be clearly written. There will be no obscuring of intentions or facts. All sides can openly debate the pros and cons of an article that truly captures the scope of the project.

I have faith that the citizens of Andover, especially in these times when growth is such a touchy issue, will not allow the town to ride roughshod over the historic neighborhood of Shawsheen. Other neighborhoods — from Ballardvale to West Andover (talk about growth problems) to Andover proper — will recognize our concerns and vote much differently than in 1996. If the neighborhoods don't stick together on these kinds of issues, we might as well just blacktop the whole town now and get it over with.

One last point: what this situation has demonstrated is not the subversion of democracy, as you imply, but the exercising of it. Our political system is based not only on majority vote, but also on checks and balances. And, as we can see here, for good reason.

Block scheduling is a work in progress

Ellen A. Parker

To the Andover Community:

In 1993, Massachusetts passed the Education Reform Act. At that time, the Andover High School staff discussed the concept of how schools, particularly our school, might meet "Time and Learning" requirements. We had many questions. What we did know was changes would need to occur. Looking at the "Time and Learning" requirements, I saw them as a catalyst to engage faculty in the review of our curriculum and how we delivered that curriculum to students.

To become familiar with all the different approaches and alternative schedules, we embarked, in 1995, on a very intense year of research and site visits to schools using alternative schedules. After the site visits, faculty gave presentations on the pros and cons of what they had observed. Faculty members had the opportunity to speak with other educators who were teaching in extended block classes. In these presentations, teachers shared types of schedules they viewed and gave out samples of schedules. These presentations were held at faculty meetings and they generated much discussion and questions.

Many of the same questions and concerns raised in the Aug. 21 Townsman article (A matter of class) were raised by teachers. During that same year teachers began to request permission to attend conferences relating to extended block teaching.

Also during that year, Andover High School was one of 10 high schools in Massachusetts to be awarded a five-year, $40,000 Restructuring Grant. In the first year we were allocated $10,000, and the money was used to support teachers attending conferences and the course "The Skillful Teacher." This course focused on teaching strategies that can be used in extended block scheduling. Clearly, the quest to find a schedule to match our needs had begun.

The 1996-'97 school year brought about the most activity. More teachers went to visit schools with alternative schedules; we repeated the process of sharing that information with faculty members.

The second year of $7,500 funding from our Restructuring Grant permitted teachers to attend more conferences and courses specifically focused on teaching in the extended block. "The Skillful Teacher" course was offered for a second time. Discussion in departments was ongoing. The mathematics department began to develop lessons for extended block teaching through department meetings and in-service work. At weekly department chairperson meetings, information was shared with the high school administration and other departments as to what teachers were looking for in a schedule.

After garnering input from the department chairs, parents, and students, the AHS administrative team designed a model and put it forth as a starting point for discussion. There was much tinkering and adjusting made by the department chairpersons to the model. We attempted to construct a design that would address the many questions and needs we had identified.

Through these discussions, the concept of 45-, 60- and 90-minute blocks was born. Throughout the process, our focus was how to impact student learning and how to keep successful teaching strategies currently used and how to build into a schedule other things we needed to increase student achievement, such as common planning time for departments, more time for teachers to work directly with students in a discipline, fewer students for each teacher to work with during a course; course length that would coincide with testing (Advanced Placement, achievement tests, state testing, SATs).

Clearly, we wanted to see the Andover High School curriculum offerings drive the type of schedule we used, and not the schedule driving the curriculum we offer.

What has emerged is called a "hybrid block." Classes will be taught in 45-, 60- or 90-minute blocks. Classes will be a quarter, semester, or a year in length. The hybrid block we will be using beginning in September 1997 is a starting point for us. We do not claim it will be a panacea for all curriculum or scheduling woes. This alternative schedule will be assessed throughout the year. We will then use the assessment and feedback to make necessary modifications for year two implementation.

As you read in the Aug. 21 Townsman, there will be a need for adjustments on the part of administrators, teachers, parents, and students. There will also be continued support provided to teachers by the high school and central office administration.

Andover High School is in the third year of our five-year Restructuring Grant, and those funds will be dedicated to hire a consultant to work with teachers on a monthly basis on issues of curriculum and instruction.

"The Skillful Teacher" course and a second course entitled "Strategies for Teaching Critical Thinking Across the Curriculum" are being offered again this year. Workshops and conference options will continue

'Dandi' march set

Local Asian-Indians to celebrate independence

The Asian-Indians of Andover will conduct a re-enactment of the "Dandi march" at Memorial Hall Library starting at 2 p.m., as part of a month-long celebration of the 50th anniversary of India's independence from the British.

Andover resident Champa Bilwakesh says the original Dandi march took place on March 12, 1930, when Mohandas Gandhi and a hand-picked lot of 78 loyalists set out from his rural ashram on the banks of the Sabarmati outside Ahmedabad, India, on a 155-mile trek to a place called Dandi to make salt.

It was a crime then, in colonial India, for Indians to make salt. The tax on imported British salt pushed prices up seven times, placing a huge burden on the people.

"Our cause is just, our means are strong and God is with us," Gandhi declared on the night before the march.

The nation watched as a heroic old man with no more than a bamboo staff challenged the British Empire. From this act of satyagraha or civil disobedience was born the movement for swaraj (self-rule) that eventually wrested India's independence from the British.

The transfer of power took place at midnight, Aug. 15, 1947.

The month-long celebration of that event, beginning at 2 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 4, will include a flag-hoisting ceremony followed by the two national anthems – India and the USA and Pandit Jawaharlal's speech "At the stroke of the midnight hour ..." followed by performance of Indian dance and music, in addition to a re-enactment of the Dandi march, says Ms. Bilwakesh.

In honor of this event the Asian-Indians in Andover will be donating books of Indian literature to Memorial Hall Library. As part of the same event there will be a reading and book-signing by writer Vikram Chandra on Sunday, Oct. 5, at Memorial Hall Library at 2 p.m.

Copies of his book, Love and Longing in Bombay, will be available for sale.

Born in New Delhi, Vikram Chandra graduated from Mayo College, a boarding school in Ajmer, Rajasthan, the traditional home of the Rajput warrior clans. Chandra came to the United States as an undergraduate student and graduated magna cum laude from Pomona College, Calif.

While at the Film School at Columbia University in New York, he came upon the autobiography of Colonel James "Sikander" Skinner, a legendary 19th century soldier, half-Indian and half-British. This book became the inspiration for Chandra's novel, Red Earth and Pouring Rain, which was written over several years at the writing programs at Johns Hopkins University and the University of Houston.

Working with John Barth at Johns Hopkins and with Donald Barthelme at the University of Houston, Chandra obtained his master's degree at Johns Hopkins and a master of fine arts at the University of Houston.

Red Earth and Pouring Rain was published in 1995 by Penguin/India in India; by Faber and Faber in the United Kingdom; and by Little, Brown in the United States. The book was received with outstanding critical acclaim. It won the David Higham Prize for Fiction and the Commonwealth Writers Prize for Best First Book. It is being translated into nine other languages.

A collection of short stories, Love and Longing in Bombay, was published in 1997 by Penguin/India in India; by Faber and Faber in the UK; and by Little, Brown in the United States. Two of these stories have been formerly published in the Paris Review and The New Yorker. The story Dharma was awarded the Discovery Prize by the Paris Review.

Vikram Chandra currently divides his time between Bombay and Washington, D.C., where he teaches creative writing at George Washington University. He is currently working on a new novel.

ice is frozen straight through. It's not," says Lt. Lynch.

With its cushion of air, the hovercraft will exert less force on thin ice than a human body would, says Lt. Guilmette.

"The ice can be thin, it can be thick, it doesn't make a difference. You'll be up on a cushion of air," he said. "That's where this will make a difference. You could break through the ice and it won't matter."

"In all honesty, I was not a hovercraft advocate in the beginning, but the more we looked around the more it seemed this was the only craft that would do all we wanted," says Chief Wright.

Until this year, if someone was stuck in the ice, a firefighter in a special suit would be tied with a line either to a ladder or a boat and pushed out across the ice and water as far as the line would reach.

Firefighters believe they now have a much better rescue option for the next time some snowmobile rider makes an unintended dive into the Merrimack.

"I think the hovercraft's a unique vehicle, but we were looking for a solution to what was a unique situation," says Chief Wright. "It's amazing to me that more firemen didn't drown the old way. It was just a crazy way to do things."

to be available to teachers. The majority of Andover High School teachers worked collaboratively, through the summer curriculum development project in July and August, to develop lesson plans for teaching in the extended block. Many of these teachers have already discussed their desire to continue their summer curriculum work as in-service courses during the school year.

As the principal, I am proud of the work the Andover faculty and staff have done in the past two years. As educators, we are good at our craft. We want to continue to deliver the best education to our students. Our delivery of educational services may come in a different format but our vision of excellence has not changed. I am confident that we are ready to undertake this challenge and provide our very best for our students.

BUSINESS PROFILES

George Abdinoor with his store's wide selection of area rugs.

Albrite Carpets

Albrite Carpets is a family-owned business founded in 1931 on Essex Street in Lawrence. The store later moved to Methuen Street in Lawrence and is now located on Route 114 at the intersection of 495 on the Lawrence/North Andover line. The store has been at this spot since 1965 .

The store stocks plenty of carpet in all sorts of colors but offers customers so much more. For example, the store has an in-plant cleaning business with special machines that can clean much more deeply than surface cleaning equipment.

We are the only one in Merrimack Valley offering in-plant cleaning," said George Abdinoor who runs the business with his brothers and a sister. They have the equipment to brush and massage rugs and carpets which then get rung out on rollers to dry. The store offers free pick-up and delivery for its in-plant cleaning service.

Those willing to drop off their rugs and carpet and pay cash for the service save 20 percent on the cost, Mr. Abdinoor said.

The store cleans fabric furniture, pillows and cushions. They also sell a wide selection of area rugs, including hand made Orientals which are also available as stair runners. Customers have over 200 rugs to chose from.

The store is an affiliated of "Abbey Carpet" store which has over 600 members.

"That gives me the buying power of 600 stores which means good prices for the customer," Mr. Abdinoor said.

They also have other types of floor coverings including ceramic and vinyl. The popular Pergo wood flooring, which is less expensive than hard wood flooring, is also available.

In addition to the wide selection of floor coverings, good installation service is a key to the success of this business.

"We have excellent installers and that is so important in this business," Mr. Abdinoor said.

The friendly staff uses this rule of thumb, he said: "We bend over backwards to satisfy people."

Albrite Carpets' hours are Monday and Wednesday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Saturday, 8 a.m. to noon.

Students enjoy the playground at Burke Elementary School and Child Development Center.

Burke Elementary School & Child Development Center

Burke Elementary School and Burke Child Development Center has a few openings left for this school year.

Situated on four nicely landscaped acres, the school offers plenty of outdoor play space for youngsters as well as state-of-the-art classrooms.

The Burke School teaches children from preschool onward to recognize the importance of education, family values, life-skills, tolerance of diversity and to respect and love themselves and others.

The school offers parents a "personal education" for their children as an alternative choice to public schools. The holistic approach, coupled with a strong, progressive, developmentally appropriate curriculum offers children the necessary skills to enhance self motivation that is so important for success throughout the educational process and their entire lives.

Alice Kontos, president and executive director of the former L'il Red Schoolhouse and her husband, Ed Kontos, headmaster of Burke Elementary, continue the established reputation for excellence earned at L'il Red Schoolhouse. Parents actively participate in curriculum choices, school policy and review of faculty and administration. Burke's parents are offered the opportunity to expand their own skills (through workshops, consultations and family outings) while developing mutual respect.

"Burke is an affordable alternative to parochial and more expensive private school education," Mr. Kontos said.

Burke Elementary School serves students in grades one through seven. Grade eight will be added next year. The nationally accredited Burke Child Development Center serves toddlers through kindergarten.

Before and after school is care is available and busing is provided for Andover and Tewksbury public school-age children. Burke Elementary School's hours are 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and extended care is available from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. in all programs. Burke Elementary School and Child Development Center is at 1565 Main St., (Route 38) Tewksbury. A PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

Oh most beautiful flower of Mount Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin assist me in this, my necessity. Oh star of the sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh holy Mary Mother of God, queen of Heaven and earth, I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart, succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your call. Oh show me herein you are my mother, Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee. (3 times). Holy Mary I place this cause in your hands. (3 times). Sweet Mother I pray for this cause in your hands (3 times). Holy Spirit, resolve all my problems, light all roads so that I can attain my goal. You gave me the devine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life, you are with me. I want this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be seperated from you even in spite of material things. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy towards me and mine. (The person must say this prayer on three consecutive days. After three days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the prayer is granted). M.E.M.

HUNNEMAN'S EXCEPTIONAL NEW PEOPLE

Meet...
Rosemary Draper & Mark Rogala

A graduate of Merrimack College and a native of North Andover, Rosemary Draper' s hometown roots are deep. Over the years, she has seen her community maintain its small town warmth and character, while welcoming new people and businesses that have provided renewed life and have kept the downtown bustling. Positively influenced by her mother's real estate entrepreneurship, and prepared by skills developed in education and retail management, Rosemary looks forward to the challenge and satisfaction of making a good match between buyers and sellers.

Another Hunneman newcomer is Mark Rogala, whose background in marketing, sales and financing, and experience in the home foundation business and house remodeling have provided a solid base for his recent decision to pursue a professional path in real estate. An Andover resident since 1969, Mark has been off to a productive start during his first few months in the field.

A special savings account for kids.

(Drive-thru not available.)*

Our Early Investor Account is a mature way to save for a child's future. It takes just $10 to open this interest bearing statement savings account. Then, every time the account reaches $500, that money is automatically transferred into a higher interest CD. While the funds in the Early Investor Certificate of Deposit begin earning a higher rate of interest, your child can continue to build the balance in their statement savings.

It's also a great way to teach kids the value of money. So come down to Andover Bank and open an Early Investor Account. And make you kid feel like a big wheel.

For information call 1-800-2CALL-AB

Andover Bank: Andover • Lawrence • Methuen • North Andover • Tewksbury Member FDIC/DIF
Andover Bank NH: Londonderry • Salem Member FDIC

* However, drive-thru is available is you are a licensed driver and have access to a registered motor vehicle. $10 balance in savings required to earn interest. Automatic transfer from Early Investor Savings to Early Investor Certificate of Deposit will be made on the first business day of the month into a one-year fixed rate CD.

"Three kids and college too"

-Doc Mackey Photo

I started at Northern Essex as a full time student when my youngest was a baby. Balancing school, family, and my work study job hasn't been easy, but an education is very important to me. I have earned degrees in computer science and business. I plan to transfer to a four-year college this spring. With my work experience as well as a background in business and computers, I should be well prepared for the job market and ready to face the world.

JR. DEVELOPMENT CLINICS

This new program will combine all the advantages of our individual court-of-four groups while adding a group dynamic, increasing the depth of player pool, and adding more variety to the program. It is a "cradle to college" concept that starts off teaching a total beginner the "love of the game" and the rudiments of tennis and finishes with an all court player of high school varsity or college level. Our Junior Development Clinics are for juniors age seven to eighteen, with classes offered for all ability levels. The first session meets once per week for eight or nine weeks. The students are grouped by age and ability. There is a structured curriculum for each class and every parent will receive a written evaluation at the end of the seventh week. The clinics are either one, one and a half, or two hours in length.

Call for free evaluation

Scholarships: It's never too late

College costs are at an all time high, and as a consequence, most families need private sector scholarships and grants.

Richard Jamison, President of Birchwood Scholarship Services, a national scholarship research and counseling organization, offers the following advice to students and families who need help:

- It's never too late to apply for private sector gift aid. Deadlines vary. No matter the time of year or education level — high school student, undergrad or grad — start searching now!
- High school students should start early. Private sector sources may be located as early as the sophomore year.
- Make the system work for you. Cooperate fully with guidance counselors and college financial aid offices.
- Work for yourself outside the system. Use all available research tools — books, publications, internet, etc. A database research organization is a tool that can save a lot of time and energy.
- Get help with a local search. Involve family and friends in contacting local community groups who might provide funding.
- Evaluate yourself. Grades aren't everything. Private sector gift aid is based on multiple aspects of individual life experience and aspirations. What are yours? A reputable counseling service can help by locating scholarships which fit the individual student's background.
- Be persistent. Money is available. Keep applying for it.

We're building "Walkway of Champions"

SHED & Kid's Club is paving the way to an expansion project which will increase the quality and availability of comprehensive school-age childcare for the Andover community.

This expansion project provides an exciting opportunity for you to contribute by purchasing an engraved brick for the SHED & Kid's Club "Walkway of Champions". The Walkway of Champions will be a paved walk in front of the new entrance located on Phillips Academy's former Abbot campus. The engraved bricks will be permanently set into concrete and prominently displayed for all to see.

A Show of Support

Since 1983, SHED has made a major contribution to the quality of life in the Andover community by affording the families and children the ability to thrive, grow and prosper in a family supportive childcare atmosphere. The SHED and Kid's Club "Walkway of Champions" will join area businesses, individuals, corporations, foundations, volunteer groups, schools, churches and social agencies. Engraved bricks are wonderful gifts to commemorate a special occasion, anniversary or birthday.

Your support of this campaign, along with our commitment to providing quality childcare, will truly pave the way to families and children in Andover.
